40 PASTORS TO CONVENE HERE

Marion Presbytery's Midwinter Meeting To Be Held at Forest Lawn Church.

Rev. J. A. Carriker will be host to about 40 members of the Marion presbytery at the annual mid-winter meeting Tuesday at Forest Lawn Presbyterian church.

Dr. James F. Riggs of New York City, representative of the general council, will be the guest speaker.

Sessions will start at 9 a. m. Following prayer by the moderator, Rev. John H. Bergen of Delaware, there will be roll call and election of a temporary clerk. Business of the morning will include appointment of temporary committees, reports of committees, including place of next meeting, reception of members and a report on pensions by Rev. Carriker, chairman.

At 12 a. m. Dr. Harry G. Finney of Mt. Gilead, chairman of the united promotion committee, will make his report. Immediately afterwards Dr. Riggs will address the presbytery on "Our Year of Opportunity." A conference led by Dr. Riggs will consider the denomination's every member canvass, benevolence budget and quotas and ways for the churches to effectively fit into the five objectives this year. Closing devotions will be conducted by Rev. Malcolm Hooker of the Old Stone church in Delaware county.

Report of the resolutions committee will be made at the noon dinner.

Election of a moderator will be the principal business of the closing session in the afternoon. The new head of the presbytery will assume his duties at the close of the meeting and will serve for one year.

Dr. C. S. Gee of Columbus, general presbyter, will make his report, after which Rev. Bergen will report for the ministerial relations committee and Rev. John R. Lloyd of Belle Center will report for the committee on bills and overtures. The meeting will close with reports of the temporary committees.

'Junior Church' To Be Organized by Wife of Pastor

A junior church for children of Wesley Methodist church will be organized Sunday at 10:30 a. m. by Mrs. D. N. Kelly, wife of the pastor.

The new church will be for children as young as 2 years of age on up to and including 12-year-olds.

Rev. and Mrs. Kelly organized similar groups with marked success in other cities in which they have served in recent years.

The junior church not only trains children to understand and be interested in the adult services which they will attend later on, but it also meets a need of those parents who dislike to attend church service because of the restiveness of their children, according to the sponsors.

The Sunday school class of young girls taught by Mrs. Kelly will assist her in conducting the church. A room will be set aside for the small children, where they may engage in handicraft and games.

A formal opening service will be conducted for the older children. Their service will consist of music and a story by Mrs. Kelly.

Officers of the church will be appointed by Mrs. Kelly until the plan is well under way, after which the children will elect their own ushers, secretary, treasurer and other officers. A choir will be organized within a short time.

Religion or Christ?

A SERMONETTE
By REV. L. E. OVERMYER
Pastor, Oakland Evangelical Church

"There is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."—Acts 4:12.

THE world is full of religion. Wherever men are found, religion of some sort thrives and flourishes, if it be but the fanatical zeal of atheism.

Our day is interested in religion. Lecturers discuss it. Men in all walks of life talk of it, write books presenting their personally designed brand of religion. Magazines abound in enthusiastic, albeit often fantastic, essays on the subject. Religion of one sort or another has become popular.

Our day gives some indications of turning to religion, sensing it and for help. Statesmen declare its virtues, its necessity. Appeal continues to be made to it in support of war. Our President calls for cooperation of all the religious forces of the nation to stem the tide of international immorality. We are becoming "religion-minded."

Certainly all of this has elements of virtue and encouragement. But the world will not be saved from itself and its sins by all of this. Religion can be, and often is, cheap, shallow, powerless. It becomes the empty mouthing of pious words, or the tool of politics.

What this day needs is not "religion," but Jesus Christ. Men must seek Him and find Him in the forgiveness of sins. He must be enthroned in hearts and lives as Savior and Lord, purging them of selfishness and lust. Natives must worship Him in spirit and in truth, praying in His name, following His counsel and His spirit.

Our hope is not in any plans for cooperation or amalgamation of the world's religions. Our hope is Christ, and Him alone.

Marriage Meddlers

Olga Admits She Could Solve Mary's Troubles If She Married Philip.

I WAS positively unnerved, I told myself, the way in which Queen Olga read my thoughts concerning Philip Veritzen and anticipated what I was going to say about him. But following her last remark I stared at her in astonishment that was almost consternation.

But I quickly pulled myself together, for more than anything else in the world just now, I wished to encompass just the thing which her comment indicated.

"Please do not think me impertinent," I said, "but I mean just that."

"I'd ever again you use a word like that between you and me," she said. "I shall not easily forgive you. You, who never saw me before my exile, you, who have given me sanctuary and released me from dependence upon Philip for the very food my daughter and I eat, you to talk of impertinence—you will break my heart!"

Madge Gives Promise

She could be extremely melodramatic herself, this stately exiled queen, I told myself. But aloud I only said quietly, with an affectionate smile at her:

"I promise never to use the word again in connection with us. And may I tell you what I mean by my reference to your marrying Philip Veritzen?"

"Please do," she said, adding, with a smile that was almost mischievous, "I am slightly interested in that subject."

"Your adverb isn't strong enough," I told her with an answering smile. "But I hope I can remedy that."

"I can't promise anything," she said cryptically, "but I am open to conviction."

"I shall do my best to convince you," I told her fervently, and paused only long enough to marshall my crowding thoughts into speech.

"I agree with you," I said, "that Philip Veritzen's determination to have your daughter marry his son is due to his old tortured sense of deep injury because of his birth. May it not also be frustration because his romance with you was so tragically shattered?"

She looked thoughtfully into space before answering. Then her eyes met mine again.

"It would be affectation to deny that," she said, "and before everything else, I want to be honest with you."

"You are," I assured her briefly, and then went slowly on, picking my words carefully as I went.

"And we both know," I said, "that it is his dearest wish to marry you."

"Desire or chivalry?" she countered quickly, with a note in her voice which was almost bitter.

Could She Control Him?

"I have something to tell you presently which will effectually answer that question," I told her confidently. "Just now I want to ask you another question. If you were married to Mr. Veritzen, wouldn't you be better able to control the situation between Olina and Noel?"

She smiled confidently.

"If I marry Philip, it will be because I believe he loves me," she said, "always presupposing that I recover my emeralds or am able to get hold of some money from my hapless country so that I will not come to him penniless."

There was such determination in her voice as she uttered the last words that my heart traveled toward my shoe soles.

"But," she went on, "if I married him, I imagine I could manage him so that he would be content to accept Noel's marriage, especially if I could make him see how unhappy it would make me to have my daughter break up another woman's home, even if Olina could do it, which I am sure she couldn't."

"I am sure he would do anything in the world you wished," I answered "because, make no mistake, he loves you most devotedly."

One Is Beloved

BY LOUISE PLATT HAUCK

YESTERDAY: Despite her love for Eric, Sue stands by Bob in his failure. They sacrifice their home and other luxuries, but she is more content than she has been in years.

Plans

"I'LL take you away," Eric had said eagerly, over the telephone.

"It has to be—no, Eric, I can't. Not possibly."

"Pity for Trenton?"

"Perhaps and not being a quitter when I'm needed." Her voice grew firmer. "It's one thing to leave a—a ship when the weather's fair; it's another to desert it in a storm. I should think you'd be the first to see that, Eric."

"I see just one thing: that either you love me or you don't. If you do, nothing else should count. If you don't, I must know it now." And then, more tenderly: "My darling, you must come!"

Her throat closed with anguish. That beloved voice had such power over her. Bitter resentment filled her that this calamity of Bob's should have befallen him just now. She had a cowardly wish that she had been safely in New York, that Bob should have read her letter, before the blow fell.

Perhaps she was being womanish about Bob's need for her; mawkishly sentimental. It might even be that Bob himself would feel freer if he had only himself to look out for. She dallied for a wildly hopeful minute with that thought, then put it from her. Bob's sick eyes looked to her for comfort a dozen times a day. Her hand on his arm could make him straighten the broad shoulders which sagged under their unaccustomed load of anxiety.

Bob was a child of the sun. Gay and charming when all went well, his bewilderment in adversity took the form of irascibility. Sue had all she could do to keep him from quarreling with his friends, his business advisers.

Night after night she went to bed bruised in spirit and tired to exhaustion in body. It seemed to her she had a battle on with half the world: With Eric, first of all. He called, he wired, he wrote. In the end he defeated his own cause by arousing her anger. She loved him nonetheless but she resented his assumption that his need for her overruled any moral obligation she might feel toward Bob. She told him so in words so clearcut and decisive that he could not fail to understand. The silence which had enveloped him ever since then sometimes terrified her.

She had Bob to fight, of course, in a score of ways. Willing, even eager to surrender everything of his own to his creditors, he was stubbornly determined to keep every possible luxury for her.

"Either your debts are my debts, and your honor is my honor, Bob, or—they are not. It is not! You can't have it both ways!"

That eventually silenced him. Then arose the question of his new job, a home for both of them. Allen had offered eagerly to give her old room back to his sister. Bob thought it would be the best plan. Sue folded her lips firmly and set forth to hunt a small house or apartment. When she found the quaint little brick building in which they now lived, Bob had been frantic with rage and humiliation. Even Allen said mildly: "It sort of advertises to the world the poor fellow's failure, Sis!"

"It does no such thing! It simply tells people—if they happen to be interested—that we are cutting our garment according to our cloth. And I'm the one who has to live here, Allen. If I prefer it to a stuffy apartment, I suppose it's my privilege?"

He laughed and put a brotherly arm about her.

"Don't fly off the handle, little Sue! You may live over a grocery store, for all I care—if it pleases you!"

The Stock

The final and longest struggle had been, oddly enough, about the position Pals had mentioned. In a town where almost every second house boasted lovely old furniture brought long ago from Virginia, from Kentucky, along with a complement of slaves, the antique business flourished mightily. Shoppers came from Kansas City, even from Chicago. Sue was known to have made a special study of period stuff, in an amateur way.

"It's the perfect job for you," Barbara had argued. "Easy hours, good pay; practically your own boss; and you've always said you hankered to go into that very business. Now that you need it, you suddenly decide you have to stay home and cook meals and wash dishes instead. It's not like you, Sue dear," she slad reproachfully, "to be so contradictory."

Sue cupped her friend's anxious face in both hands.

"Babs, it seems to me best. Can't we let it go at that?"

She would not explain further; but deep in her soul she knew that for her to go out into the business world and earn her living would be the final straw where Bob was concerned. He must feel that she was dependent upon him. He must be spurred on by that dependence to renewed effort. He was too young, too really clever, to resign himself to his present position. He had it in him to build a new business career for himself, if he were sufficiently pressed by need—her need. Sue intended to see that he felt that need.

It had taken nearly three months to settle, one by one, these vexing questions; but they were settled now, and spring was here, and Sue could draw a long breath and relax.

"Stay to lunch?" she asked Patsy, forgetting the engagement just mentioned.

"Heavens, no! I told you I'm meeting some friends downtown; and anyway I'll bet you eat bread and milk off the kitchen table!"

"You're wrong, my dear. Bob comes home for lunch—or didn't you know? That's another of the advantages of this house; it's almost downtown though it has all that lawn in front, and the garden behind."

"Garden! You're the world's prize optimist if you really see a garden in that backyard. You're funny, Sue. You act as pleased with this silly house as you did with the lovely place Bob gave you when you were married." On her way to the door, she fired a parting shot. "Did you know that it was really Cecily who brought about Treadon's failure? It was—Allen told me so. She owned a lot of stock, you know, and she sold it, or something."

Sue pondered this news when she was alone. She had no doubt it was true. Cecily's inborn mischievousness would dictate exactly that sort of thing, if the opportunity arose. That it could not have arisen unless the business was tottering, she realized perfectly; but in all probability Bob could have weathered the emergency if Cecily had helped instead of turning against him.

"That's twice she's come between me and happiness," she thought with sudden rage. "I was really beginning to—well, to love Bob when she came here and blew everything to bits. And this time . . . I'd have been with Eric by now if she'd not interfered as she did!"

She was glad that Bob called presently to say he could not be home for lunch. It would give her time to get hold of herself. Women, she had often observed, were capable of making the most important sacrifices for others, and then spoiling it all by bitterness and reproach afterwards. She was going to keep herself in hand!

No Connection

"Sue, you little fiend, I never know whether you do these things purposely, or whether Fate simply places the chance in my hands!"

"Like what, Bob?" she asked demurely from her low stool in front of the fire.

"Like your springing the news on me that you're going to have a baby just when this Queen City deal is pending!"

She laughed. "The two things have no connection, lamb!"

He eyed her darkly from his shabby leather chair.

"Oh, haven't they. You're a schemer, if there ever was one. You say you saw Dr. Van Ness last week but I take notice you failed to mention the big news until tonight; until I am able to give you the complete details of the Queen City affair." He filled his pipe thoughtfully. "It's bound to change my decision in the matter."

"Which way, Bob?" She clasped her arms about her knees, looking like a child in her red silk dress, with the firelightgleaming on her dark curls.

"Will decide you for or against?"

"H'm! You're asking me? As if you hadn't it all thought out in that diabolical mind of yours! Would you mind letting me know? Do we rear our son in a small country town, with his dad as owner of the sole shoe store, or do we carry on here as we are?"

"You tell me, Bob!"

He sighed. It was part of Sue's technique. It was the way she had forced him to make decision after decision. He realized somewhat dimly that his character was strengthening under this process; that the light-hearted young man who had fallen heir to his father's successful business was a stranger to the Bob Trenton who was picking himself up again after a bad spill.

"I suppose there's no question about it," he admitted a little reluctantly. "There's no future in what I'm doing now. There's the promise of one in Queen City if old Pearson's plans go through. But have you thought what life will be like in a country town, Sue? A sort of death-in-life for you, I should think!"

"Why not for you also?"

"Gosh," he told her simply, "I'll be too busy to know whether I'm in Queen City or Pekin!"

"I expect to be fairly busy myself," was her composed reply.

Airlines Finish Biggest, Safest Year in History

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Jan. 6—The Air Transport Association of America reported today 1939 was the biggest and safest year in the history of the air transport industry.

President Edgar S. Gorrell estimated that at the end of the year the nation's airlines, domestic and international, had flown 580,000,000 passenger miles, an increase of nearly 40 per cent over the 415,000,000 miles in 1938. Employment rose 23 per cent during the year.

He said more than 15,000,000 pounds of express were carried in 1939 as compared with 8,452,800 in 1938, and mail poundage increased from 25,500,000 in 1938 to more than 27,000,000 last year.

More than 80 per cent of the 1939 revenue was from passenger traffic, whereas five years ago airline revenue was 70 per cent from mail business and 30 per cent from passengers, express and all other sources.

Gorrell said that on Dec. 31, the domestic airlines completed 620,000,000 passenger miles or 67,000,000 plane miles and the carriage of 1,400,000 passengers without injury to any person. This represented an increase of more than 400 per cent in passenger miles per passenger fatality, compared with the 1936-1938 three year average.

"From all records available," Gorrell said, "it seems safe to say this is the greatest increase in safe travel of any class of passenger service for any similar period in the history of transportation in the United States."

For the future, Gorrell predicted a continually improving service shortening the time of travel and trade; true commuter service between great metropolitan centers; more frequent transAtlantic service; clipper service from the Pacific coast to New Zealand in 1940.

JUST THINGS

By EDNA B. DUTTON

Echoes

THE tree and mistletoe have gone the way of all flesh, the New Year's resolutions are "busted" and we're all to a flying start in a brand new year and a brand new decade. Christmas still holds a prominent spot in most everyone's vocabulary so it won't be late to talk about it here. There were stories of lovely Christmas cards (they seem to grow prettier each year), and there will be the same old worry and wonder—what to do with those we have been hoarding—whom will of necessity have to be disposed of to make room for the 1940 collection. One of the cleverest of the crop (and those fortunate enough to receive one still are chuckling), bore the following inscription stamped on the back of the envelope: "Do not open 'til Roosevelt says it's Christmas."

Good Turn

ONE matron we know has a Christmas gift coming to her. A "good turn" early in the glad holiday season is responsible. It seems that at that very happy time of the year when all of us just seem to be bulging with "good turns" one of her little friends found herself in a position to attend a very unusual musical event, but the catch was, her budget was budgeted out. Realizing that it would be an advantage for her little friend to attend the concert (it was student priced), she proffered the price of admission, just as a little gift. A mad scramble through her purse failed to bring forth the even change, and by way of driving home a lesson, gave the youngster the larger amount, adding that she "might bring the change over that evening." The evening came and went, and no change. A couple of days and the concert-goer appeared, fairly beaming. "You know, Mrs. L——, I took the change and bought you a Christmas gift! It isn't quite finished yet, but I'll bring it over soon." Yep, she did just what you would do, got a chuckle out of it.

Surprise

CHRISTMAS 1939 will be a never-to-be-forgotten one for a couple of youngsters who spent it with grandpa and grandma. They had a grand time but it was the trip home that capped the climax. The weather was a bit discouraging and the trip home looked like a pretty big jaunt by motor to grandpa and grandma, so after a telephone call to daddy and mother it was all set to send the youngsters home by train. So to the depot went the quartet, the train pulled in and into the coach piled the kiddies. Faces wreathed in smiles, noses flattened against the window for another look at grandpa and grandma. Well—it was all too much for grandpa. They're so precious and looked "so cute" he'd just have to have one more kiss. So, against grandma's protests that there wasn't time, into the coach he went. But time was up, the conductor said "all aboard" and away went the train, kiddies, grandpa and all. And not another stop for 25 miles or more. The youngsters were jubilant, grandpa was a bit "sold" and grandma wasn't a bit surprised, for hadn't she told him? Grandpa doesn't have much to say about the trip but he does admit that he never did so much window shopping in all his life as while waiting for the train "back home."

YOUR HEALTH

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Freezing Treatment

ONE DAY a year or so ago a Philadelphia nerve specialist had an epileptic, insane patient who escaped from restraint and wandered out into a cold, ranging snowstorm. He had an epileptic attack and lay unconscious for several hours in the snow. He was thinly and poorly clad, and when he was found his body temperature was reduced to about 80. No thought or hope was held out for his recovery, but with surprising absence of symptoms he returned to normal.

But something else happened. He was also suffering with a cancer, and after the freezing the cancer began to disappear. A section was taken out of it for microscopic examination and it was found that the nuclei of the cells had all disintegrated and the cell bodies were being absorbed.

Apparently cancer cells couldn't stand cold as well as the rest of the body cells. It had a selective destructive action on them.

Thus began the freezing method of treating malignant growths. I have just come from seeing the method in action and I think it has been one of the two or three most exciting experiences of my life. I feel as I did when I heard the first report of insulin in diabetes and of liver extract in anemia.

Should Be First

A week ago I put down, as the most important advances in medicine made 1939, the treatment of chronic deafness and the "convulsive" treatment of depressed mental state. But if I had seen this freezing treatment before, I would have put it in first place.

The most astonishing thing is that patients can live at all in these temperatures. The body temperature can be brought as low as 70 degrees F. and kept there for hours, and still the body returns to normalcy with no trace of its arctic experience. The patients all report that the experience is a pleasant, dream-like state, with a succession of happy, pleasant fancies.

Only the advanced and hopeless cases, for which nothing can be done by surgery and X-ray, are being treated, but apparent cures are frequent. It is naturally too early for the results to be assessed. The cancers may recur, probably will. But one of the first results is to relieve intractable pain. It is the only addition to cancer treatment for 35 years that seems to have solid, practical results.

Sanctuary for Murphy

PERSISTENT reports that Frank Murphy wanted above all other things to take another whirl at politics in Michigan, which turned thumbs down on him in 1938 when he ran on his record, now go by the board. Mr. Murphy has been appointed to succeed the late Justice Butler in the U. S. supreme court.

There were two reasons for doubting he would be chosen. First, was his own apparent desire to recover the prestige he lost when voters in his own state turned him out of office. He seemed to feel keenly the sting of repudiation. Evidently he thought he should be able to win popular approval for his record before thinking about an appointment to the supreme court. Many of his countrymen still think so.

The other reason was the political ineptitude that would be entailed in appointing to the supreme court a man whose attitude on law had been characterized by an attack of weak knees and moral vertigo during the 1937 sit-down strikes in Michigan's automobile factories. It was doubted that President Roosevelt, despite his known interest in boosting Mr. Murphy, would care to boost him all the way to the supreme court under such unfavorable circumstances. His appointment as attorney general under the same circumstances hadn't been anything to boast about.

Nevertheless, Mr. Murphy has been given the nod. In his favor are his Michigan background and his religion, both strictly political assets. The east and south have had more than a fair share of court appointees, and the late Justice Butler also was a Catholic. Otherwise, Mr. Murphy cannot be called a distinguished appointee. Before confirming the appointment the senate will be entitled to close scrutiny of his qualifications.

Forecasting

THE standard implement of forecasters is the word "if." Everything will be all right—if nothing goes wrong.

Outlooks for 1940, being broadcast at this season, are generally favorable. Business is expected to continue good on the momentum built up during 1939 for at least the first quarter of the new year, then is expected to taper off moderately, returning to higher levels toward the close of the year.

The big ifs in the predictions concern war, politics and taxes. It's sad but true that cessation of war in 1940 would not be immediately favorable, though in the long run war inevitably must hurt business everywhere more than it helps it.

Politics is the key to business psychology. Resumption of business baiting, as in the past, would be an unfavorable influence. Because 1940 is a campaign year, because the party in power naturally wants to stay in power and because New Deal reform has lost its hold on popular imagination, it is expected the political atmosphere will be favorable.

Taxes, unfortunately, cannot be turned on and off like political rallying cries. The piper must be paid for the music completed and the music still being played. There is no possibility of reduction of the tax revenue being collected and slight possibility of any important redistribution of the burden as it now exists. The best that can be hoped for here is termination of policies that make even heavier taxation necessary, accompanied by curtailment of expenditures to make revenue balance expenditures.

Embargo

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., which might be expected to know better, and does, is going to make a silly razoo against Communism by putting an embargo on the name of Lenin. No publication containing the name may enter the city under the terms of a resolution passed by the Cambridge council.

The embargo won't work and probably won't be taken seriously by anyone except muddleheads, yet it illustrates a common type of confusion. Cambridge isn't the first to make the mistake.

Lenin is not Communism any more than is Stalin, Marx, Browder or a Harvard pink. Communism is a way of thinking that has been jelled into an ideology by the preachings of various individuals, usually in violent disagreement with each other.

Like pellagra, it is a symptom of a physical condition, readily curable by treating the condition Communism can't be eliminated by passing a law about it, but only by developing resistance to it.

This is obvious, but only to persons willing to look behind the symptom for the cause. Cambridge, it may be assumed, is as sensible as any other American community—and has its quota of muddleheads, too.

"Economy" Budget Regarded as Actually the Biggest Spending Program of New Deal.

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6—If you want to know the inside on Mr. Roosevelt's budget my advice is that you suppress that emotion, and here are a few to "Blondie" or "Bringing Up Father," and enjoy yourself. Exposing budgetary sleight-of-hand is like telling how to do a card trick. It ruins the fun, but if you insist—

Mr. Roosevelt's trend is getting clearer all the time. That budget is by a considerable margin, but not as large as he has prepared.

On its smiling face it appears to be a stern economizing measure. Actually it contemplates the largest spending program in New Deal history. This can be proved.

X-ray pictures will not disclose anywhere within its proposed list of expenditures an item of $502,-500,000 which congress must appropriate under the law for old age pension payments. The treasury must pay this sum out to the old-age pension trust fund, whence it will be piecemealed to such of the aged as fulfill requirements.

Mr. Roosevelt has put this expenditure on the receipts side of his ledger, not as income, but as an expenditure to be deducted from old age taxes. As a result he saved himself the embarrassment of mentioning it among his expenditures.

If he had listed it as the expense that it is, his budget would have shown an outlay of $9,027,-000,000, not $8,424,000,000 as the headlines have advertised.

Farm Aid and Relief

Thus corrected, his expenditures will be approximately what he has been spending this year, the largest spending year of the government to date. His budgeted expense for this year runs $8,-029,900,000 or $72,000,000 over what is proposed for next year.

But next year's prospective expenditures go even beyond that. The President has omitted entirely proposed appropriations for farm benefit payments, as advocated by the agriculture department and apparently certain to be enacted by congress. Agriculture Secretary Wallace has been wanting between $225,000,000 and $250,000,000 for this purpose. Mr. Roosevelt himself mentioned this defect in his figures by saying he would have to ask congress for more money for this purpose if farm prices were not above parity payment level this spring.

Mr. Roosevelt mentioned another defect. His relief cuts he indicated were perhaps too drastic. Most New Dealers would have eliminated the "perhaps". The President cut relief one-third in the announced "hope" that the improving business cycle would curtail the problem, but he warned he would be back for more money if it did not. On the inside the understanding is common that in both these instances, deficiency appropriations will have to be made after the elections are over, probably before.

Economies Wiped Out

The story of what Mr. Roosevelt has done to an income is simply this. He has economized on some items, mainly relief and agriculture, but the increase for national defense and other things nearly wiped out his economies—and these will not only be wiped out completely, but exceeded, if parity payments are to be made or additional relief appropriations are necessary, as expected.

Shrinking Debt

The trick of "the shrinking debt" is likewise a swift one. Apparently Mr. Morgenthau left the debt out in the rain or something; it shriveled to an extent of $1,150,-000,000 or more during the 1940 fiscal year while the treasury was losing about $4,000,000,000 in deficit expenditures, and the debt should have been increased by this amount.

To accomplish the shrinkage Mr. Roosevelt took $1,150,000,000 from the cash drawer of the treasury, reducing the working balance by this amount. He may have done something else also, but even the budget office cannot explain it fully.

Seizure of Cash

Fazzle also was his withdrawal of $700,000,000 from the reconstruction finance corporation and other lending agencies. The President explained they did not need this much of their capital which had been appropriated previously. But instead of counting this as a receipt, he omitted any reference to it until he came to next year's deficit and then he deducted it from that.

These two steps—the seizures of cash from the till for debt retirement and the recapture of capital from the lending agencies—make the budget look nearly $2,000,-000,000 better than ordinary receipts and expenditures would have made it.

Purpose

Main purpose of all this fun with the national books was to get the President out of the jam he was in, with the debt approaching the $45,000,000,000 statutory limit. The President has thus relieved himself of the necessity of asking for an increase in the debt limit until after election by altering the bookkeeping total of the debt, the expenditures and the deficit. He has done more. He has figured everything out so that congress would appear to be required to grant him a $450,000,-000 increase in taxation unless it wants to assume the odious political responsibility for increasing the debt—an odium it refused to bear last session even under administration pressure.

Can't Be Stopped

All the fun is "in accordance with law" as the President once said about the Panama ship deal. You may smile at it, but you cannot stop it, and you might not do it if you could.

Only thing it proves is that you should have followed my advice in the first place and turned back to "Blondie."

Budget Reform Need Seen

11 Consecutive Deficits May Speed Changes in Law.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S new budget may be the last one any chief executive will submit in the same form. Eleven successive years of deficit financing prompt the conclusion that something is wrong with the budget system and should be fixed without further delay.

Congressional critics are busy. They claim a new budget law is needed badly. Their ideas include creation of a budget committee to limit executive discretion in recommending appropriations and a law prohibiting congress from appropriating more money in any one year than the government expects to receive from all sources in that year, unless concurrent legislation is enacted to raise additional revenue and liquidate the deficit in 15 years.

United States Chamber of Commerce, voicing a widespread sentiment among businessmen, thinks congress should overhaul its taxing and spending procedure so as to tighten its control of government purse strings. Everybody agrees that government cannot operate at a deficit indefinitely and that sooner or later something must be done to bring spending and income into balance.

UNTIL 1909 there was no recognition, either in law or practice, that the President had responsibility for preparing a financial program. Administrative agencies had no responsibility for keeping down the total of expenditures. Each tried to get as much as possible for itself and devil take the hindmost.

In 1909, however, the sundry civil appropriation act provided that the President should be informed if estimated appropriations exceeded estimated revenue so that he might advise congress as to how to adjust the disparity. Little or no action was taken, but a principle had been declared.

Adoption of a budget system was recommended in 1912 by President Taft's commission on economy and efficiency. On hearing of the President's intention to draw up a sample budget, however, congress gave vent to its jealousy of the executive and ignored his recommendations.

By 1916 the movement for budgetary reform had gained such momentum that both parties adopted platform planks in its favor. The project was dropped during the World war, but the war's effect on federal finances produced a climax of budgetary interest in 1921. The budget and accounting act of that year was passed as a result.

It directed the President to prepare and transmit to congress each year a budget showing revenues and expenditures for the current and ensuing years. A budget bureau was established to help him carry out the duty and a general accounting office created as an independent establishment to perform auditing functions.

THE decade following establishment of a budget system found the government in a period of retrenchment. With advent of the New Deal in 1933 the government reversed its course and entered a period of rapid expansion. President Roosevelt modified the budget policy of his predecessors by including recommended appropriations for activities not authorized by existing legislation. Mr. Roosevelt also took advantage of executive discretion by introducing the "extraordinary" budget, separating "emergency" from "regular" expenditures.

Many students of public finance contend the "extraordinary" budget violates the fundamental principle of budgetary unity and is unsound. The point is open to argument, but it cannot be denied the practice of divorcing spending from income, leading to an ever-mounting national debt, has caused widespread alarm. Remedial action is in order.

Incentive to make improvement is not confined to congress, nor to critics outside congress. President Roosevelt has suggested reforms of his own.

Financial responsibilities of government have grown by leaps and bounds in the last decade and are still growing. According to standards of good accounting and sound financial practice the United States is still poking along in the horse and buggy age of budgetary practice. By the token that government in the final analysis is nothing but financial stewardship, budgeting is government's most vital responsibility. The "rocks of loose fiscal policy" that President Roosevelt once said wrecked liberal governments are nothing more or less than bad bookkeeping and unsound methods of handling money.

President's Speech Regarded as One of His Wisest, Maybe Not His Best.

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

THE President's annual message on the state of the Union was, for him, singularly colorless. He trod cautiously, he awakened no sleeping dogs, he made no challenges, he attacked nobody, he held out no incandescent promises, he painted no bogies, he flattered no classes. He appealed for unity. The tone of the speech is less that of the Young Lochinvar than of the elder statesman.

Dorothy Thompson

Since that is exactly the way the President of the United States should talk, and should feel, at this seismic moment of history, the speech, though it will not rank among his best, ranks among the wisest. It is the speech of a man who knows that, both for internal political and foreign political reasons, this is no time to rock the boat.

There is no retreat in the speech, however, from the position he has taken either on foreign or on domestic affairs.

It is always a pleasure to hear the President on foreign affairs. He spoke without a trace of demagogy, with courage, conviction, and realism.

The first reaction of America to the war abroad was, unquestionably, a tendency to retreat from the world altogether.

The most articulate and organized pressure upon congress and the President came, and is still coming from the extreme isolationists, who have counseled us to barricade ourselves on this continent, or on this hemisphere, and cut the cables that join us to the rest of the planet.

Mr. Roosevelt has resisted this pressure and has, I believe, lived down, by sagacity, by candor, and by consistency the accusation that he was bent on dragging us into war.

He has refused to allow his office to be allied with this or that "peace bloc."

Nation As Peace Bloc

He has insisted that the entire nation is a peace bloc.

But he has also insisted that peace is a positive state of affairs and that the United States remains interested in the ending of world anarchy, the creation of clear and universal standards and principles of international law, the righting of injustices by the democratic method of arbitration and discussion and the preservation in the world of human and national freedom.

The President knows, better than most Americans, that this generation has a rendezvous with destiny—not only this generation of Americans but this generation of mankind.

And he believes passionately that the United States of America should and must have something to say about where that rendezvous is going to be kept and what that destiny is going to be.

The most severe critics of the President must admit this: that throughout the world, wherever men suffer humiliation and injustice; wherever they are engaged, against their will, in mortal combat; wherever they secretly and sullenly cherish the never-to-be-extinguished hope for liberty, equality and decency, the name Franklin Delano Roosevelt brings a ray of light into the darkness, and the words "The United States of America" awakens a nostalgia — among men and women who have never seen the skyline of a single American harbor.

The President's undefeated faith in the democratic way of life, with whatever adjustments and changes this turbulent century may demand; his luck—the democratic luck—of weathering even his own greatest mistakes; his spontaneous capacity for indignation; and his gift — the greatest possessed by any living head of a state—of expressing the humane and democratic faith in eloquent words, have added immensely to this nation's prestige.

Not Caught Unawares

And nothing that has happened abroad has caught him unawares. He was long prepared in his mind for the developments which have come, and therefore has been able to confront the immediate events without panic.

His emphasis in this speech upon the importance of the reciprocal trade treaties suggests that, in the absence of any very clear issue between the two great parties, the good old tariff fight may be revived again.

Since the trade treaties have helped to cement our relations with South America; since, in wartime, they mean very little as far as the rest of the world is concerned, and since they are a particular province and program of the least controversial member of the cabinet, Mr. Hull, this is, perhaps, a shrewd political move.

The President, in this speech, touched only upon the larger issues of foreign and domestic policy, rightly picking unemployment as the chief concern of the latter.

Here again he reiterated what has been the basic economic philosophy of the New Deal and what this column believes is its greatest weakness and fallacy—namely, the underconsumption theory.

This theory has got to be looked

END OF PARITY FUND NOT DUE UNTIL 1941

Death Would Not Show Up in Income at Once.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6—Administration farm officials explained today that, if congress makes no provisions for farm parity payments in the agriculture department appropriation bill, the effects of such subsidies would not show up in produced incomes until the summer and fall of 1941.

In his budget message, President Roosevelt made no provision for parity payments, saying he was influenced by the hope that crops would advance to a point where farm income would not be injured if the payments were not voted.

Officials said that $225,000,000 appropriated last year for parity payments would be distributed during the coming summer and fall among producers of cotton, wheat, corn, rice and possibly some types of tobacco. Only those farmers cooperating with crop control programs will be eligible.

Parity payments get their name from a farm price goal set up in the 1938 crop control act. This legislation authorizes programs designed to raise and maintain prices of major farm products at a level which would give them purchasing power, in terms of non-farm goods and services, equal to that they held in the 1909-14 period.

The farm act authorizes payments to provide the farmer full parity return. However, prices have been averaging so far short of parity that congress modified the immediate income goal, in the last two appropriation bills, to 75 per cent of parity.

JACKSON APPROVED BY SENATE GROUP

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6 — President Roosevelt's nomination of Robert H. Jackson to be attorney general won approval from a senate judiciary subcommittee today in less than five minutes.

Subject to confirmation by the senate, Jackson, now solicitor general, will succeed to the attorney generalship when Frank Murphy, also subject to senate confirmation, goes to the supreme court.

Another judiciary subcommittee has yet to act on the Murphy nomination but prompt approval is expected.

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 6 — The body of Dorothy Mackaye, former stage actress, lay in the county morgue today pending an autopsy to determine the nature of the injuries, sustained in an automobile accident Tuesday night, which caused her death yesterday.

Members of the film colony, meanwhile, called at the home of Miss Mackaye's husband, actor Paul Kelly, to express their sympathy.

Both Kelly and Miss Mackaye, 37, served prison terms after the 1927 death of Miss Mackaye's husband, actor Ray Raymond, from a beating at the hands of Kelly.

Kelly, convicted of manslaughter, served 25 months in San Quentin prison. Miss Mackaye went to the same prison for a year for concealing facts surrounding her husband's death.

She married Kelly in 1932 and retired from the stage. Kelly, resuming his screen career, has appeared in many pictures. Miss Mackaye, once prominent on Broadway, is best-known for her stage roles in "The Dove" and "Son-Daughter."

LOW WORLD MARKET STRAINS WHEAT PRICE

Safeguards for U. S. Under Increased Stress.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Jan. 6—Safeguards erected to protect American wheat producers from low world prices were subjected to increased train today as the domestic market displayed pronounced susceptibility to the value of wheat in Canada.

U. S. prices ranged as high as 17 to 36 cents a bushel above wheat in other surplus producing countries, due to the crop control and loan programs, drouth, the duty on importations and the recent export subsidy system. However the grain trade watched closely action of the Winnipeg market because Canadian prices are near an import basis despite the duty of 42 cents per bushel.

Canada has one of the largest surpluses ever piled up pressing for a market. More than 400,000,000 bushels were for sale when the crop was harvested and about 10 per cent of this now is stored under bond at U. S. eastern ports to be ready for shipment to Europe. Much more is held at points near the United States.

Prices of wheat at Winnipeg the past week have widened from a 14 cents per bushel discount under Chicago quotations to around 17 cents. There is an exchange difference of 8 to 10 cents a bushel plus the fact that Canadian grain can be sent to some eastern U. S. points at cheaper transportation cost than must be paid to deliver domestic wheat.

OHIO EDUCATORS ASK TEACHER TENURE ACT

Pledge Campaign for Law As Session Ends.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 6—Ohio education members concluded their annual convention today pledged to campaign for a teacher tenure law guaranteeing their profession and financial security.

A special committee will be named to draft legislation providing employment security for properly qualified teachers, the right of continuous employment after a probationary period, protection from unwarranted salary reductions and public hearings in dismissal appeals.

The association's education council reaffirmed its support of a state board of education proposals, defeated at the last election, and advocated another popular vote "as early as practical."

In reviewing school finances yesterday, Bliss said:

"The most encouraging item in the 1939 picture has been the handling of the state's obligations to finance schools under the foundation law. All four quarterly disbursements have been paid in cash when due for the first time since the law was enacted in 1935."

The race for association presidency lay between Dr. E. J. Ashbaugh, Miami university education dean, and C. D. Van Tassel, Toledo Woodward High school teacher. The nominee receiving the largest vote will succeed President George A. Bowman of Lakewood (formerly of Marion) and the other, Vice President W. R. Bell of Carrollton.

The war ministry change overshadowed the others, for the proverbial man in the street regarded Hore-Belisha as second only to Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, in prosecuting the war against Germany.

A commentator in Labor's Daily Herald said Prime Minister Chamberlain had "started a blitzkrieg of his own," and inquired "What on earth has been going on behind the scenes?"

The Express said the choice of Stanley as Hore-Belisha's successor was "a most unsatisfactory appointment."

U. S.-ARGENTINA DEAL ON TRADE COLLAPSES

News Eases Tension in Congress Over Program.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6—Suspension of negotiations for a trade agreement with Argentina today eased the burden of congressional leaders about to begin a struggle for extension of the administration's reciprocal trade treaties program.

Some of the most active opposition to the proposed extension has come from western cattle and agricultural interests, which feared that an Argentine treaty would lower the tariff bars against that nation's canned meats, wool, linseed and other highly competitive products.

The state department, in announcing last night that the discussions had been broken off, gave no explanation and said that the two governments would issue statements early next week. But it was reported reliably, both here and in Buenos Aires, that the discussions snagged on the question of treatment of these products. The United States wished to place quotas on them, and Argentina objected.

Harding Cagers Suffer First N.C.O. Loss at Ashland

Marion Suffers 35-30 Defeat; Lands in Tie for Second Place

By CHARLES HOSTETLER
Marion Star Sports Editor

Marion Harding's hope of a perfect North Central Ohio conference record was shattered last night when the pennant-bound Presidents hit the first major obstacle on their league path and came away second best, 35-30, in a duel at Ashland

Observers today were hopeful that Coach Dewey N Bohyer's crew might be able to salvage enough from the wreckage of their first circuit loss to combat the pace-setting Mt Vernon Yellow Jackets on even terms when they meet in Knox county next week

Harding's loss sent the locals skidding into a second-place tie with Ashland and permitted the Mounties to remain alone in the NCO driver's seat The Jackets have won three straight in league competition rolling up 138 points to 99 for their foes, while Harding and the A's each have won two of three starts

After scoring point-for point with the Hilltoppers during a fast moving first quarter, the Prexies saw their foes pile up a long lead as the game progressed They were behind by a single point 14-13, at the quarter post but trailed, 21-17, at intermission Outscored for the third consecutive period, the Prexies were on the short end of a 33-25 count going into the final stanza

Only three points, a fielder and free throw by Russ Reichardt were chalked up during the first six minutes of the fourth round and the A's still headed the parade, 33 28 Dale Hudson flipped a long shot through the hoop to cut the lead to three tallies but in the fading seconds Pivotman Beal netted the goal that iced the game for the A s

An unusual number of fouls were called 16 against Marion and 20 against Ashland Three of the Hilltoppers were banished via personals Duffey and Bedwell leaving the game early in the second half Andy Irvine, Marion starting forward, fouled out in the third round and Howell, opposing guard, left the game by the same route near the close

Marion's performance from the free throw lane was costly, since the teams were almost evenly matched on action shots The locals netted 11 goals to As 12, but made only eight of 23 charity tosses while the opposition was cashing in on 11 of 15 shots

Vince Barr, captain and forward of Coach Red Longley s crew, was the game's standout performer He won a berth on last year s all-NCO team and he's a cinch to repeat if he keeps going at his present clip Vince made 15 points to pace the Ashland attack

Dale Hudson was the top Marion scorer, accounting for 10 points while Russ Reichardt had seven Johnny Roberts, five and Birnbaum and Irvine three each

Parochial Second Stringers Also Victorious

Marion St Mary cagers grabbed their seventh victory in nine starts by edging Carey, 33-31, in closely fought fray on the Steam Shovel court last night

The invading Wyandot countians managed to hold an 8-7 lead at the end of the first period but by halftime the Saints were in the driver s seat, 14-11 From there to the finish they held a narrow margin, outpointing their rivals 10-9, in the third round only to see their lead cut to a slim brace of tallies in the final quarter

Ray Robbins hammered the hoop for a quartet of shots from the field and three more from the free throw lane for 11 points to pace the locals' attack Forward Heck of Carey was the evening s top scorer He registered 15 and proved to be a constant menace to the Irish defense

Sinks 5 Free Throws

Johnny Wilmes turned in some sort of a record by sinking five of seven free throws for a 714 percentage from the charity line He also counted two fielders to run his point total to nine Schuler netted five tallies with Terzo and Shoup garnering four each

Reinhart s free throw and a charity toss and pivot shot from the field by Heck put the visitors in front 4-0 in the opening minutes of the game Schuler hit the net with a push shot and Robbins followed with a long range attempt and free throw to boost St Mary to the top 5-4 Burson and Heck retaliated with shots from the side of the court for Carey but Robbins successful toss just ahead of the gun kept the race neck-and-neck, 8-7

Centering more effort on defense the Saints held Carey to three points a foul by Heck and a follow-up toss by Reinhart during the second stanza Meanwhile Robbins looped in three fielders and Schuler added a foul putting St Mary on top 14-11, at halftime

Busy Third Quarter

Heaviest scoring of the duel came in the third round, Carey netting four fielders and a free throw while the Saints checked in five goals to stay ahead 24-20 A desperate attempt to overcome the Saints lead fell just short of its mark as the clubs chased through a hectic closing period

The St Mary second-stringers copped the preliminary 20-13 to hand Carey s reserve club its first defeat of the season Summaries follow

SCENE FROM "NINOTCHKA" AT PALACE

Garbo finds love and laughter with Melvyn Douglas in her new comedy, "Ninotchka," due at the Palace Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday.

"Ninotchka," Garbo Picture, at Palace 4 Days Next Week

Satirical Comedy Presents Famous Star in New Type Role; "Gulliver's Travels" Coming.

Garbo's new picture, "Ninotchka," hailed as one of the best satirical comedies of the year, has been booked for the Palace on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. It brings a Garbo who laughs, who swings it, who wears the latest creations by Adrian, one of the country's top designers.

Playing a Russian Soviet woman who "goes Paris" and changes from a plainly-clad ex-soldier in the women's Battalion of Death to a creature of glamour wooed by Melvyn Douglas in the role of a French count; Garbo's early scenes were in make-up designed to conceal her beauty. She wore a coarse woolen dress and woolen socks with peasant boots. Then she buys her first lipstick, then her first chic hat, and finally she blossoms in the gorgeous Adrian modes.

Ernest Lubitsch directed the making of this sophisticated romantic comedy. Felix Bressart, Sig Rumann and Alexander Granach earned the name, "The Three European Ritz Brothers" for their work as a trio of funmakers with Garbo. They play three Bolshevik commissars who, sent to Paris on a government mission, acquire a taste for champagne and Parisian gayeties. Ina Claire of the Broadway stage plays the feminine villain in an ultra-polite way. Bela "Dracula" Lugosi has his first sympathetic role.

"Ninotchka" will follow the Sunday-only showing of Lupe Velez's picture, "Mexican Spitfire," in connection with the stage presentation of "French Varieties." Leon Errol of the rubber knees and handsome Donald Woods support the fiery Lupe.

The Wednesday film will be "All Women Have Secrets," featuring Jean Cagney, young sister of star James Cagney. Virginia Dale, Janet Waldo and Betty Moran, three other lovely girls, have leading roles. It's a film that shows college life as something more than a four-year spree of football and rumble-seat romance.

"Gulliver's Travels," the first feature-length cartoon since Disney's "Snow White," will open an indefinite stay next Saturday. It's been produced in Technicolor by Max Fleischer, noted for his amusing short cartoons.

Twin cups to be worn like spectacles make a new eye shade for persons who do much reading.

'THE CHAMP' ON MARION BILL

Beery-Cooper Fight Film To Be Shown Two Days Starting Sunday.

"The Story of Alexander Graham Bell," starring Don Ameche in the title role, and "The Champ," co-starring Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper, will be brought back to the Marion next week. "The Champ" will be shown Sunday and Monday on a bill with an outdoor action drama, "Riders of Black River," starring Charles Starrett. "The Champ" was made years ago, when Cooper was a small lad, but it's a film fans remember. Beery plays an old prize fighter everlastingly trying to make a comeback. Cooper plays his small, hero-worshipping son. Irene Rich, Rosco Ates and Hale Hamilton are among the supporting players.

The Ameche film in which the drama of the invention of the telephone is intermingled with the poignant romance of Bell and his deaf sweetheart, played by Loretta Young, will be shown Tuesday and Wednesday. The other picture will be "Inside Information," featuring June Lang, Dick Foran, Mary Carlisle and Harry Carey. Foran is cast as a rookie cop who volunteers to track down a mob of jewel robbers and is forced to pit his knowledge of scientific detection against the opposition of Carey, grizzled war-dog of the force. Miss Lang has the romantic lead opposite Foran.

"Charlie Chan in Honolulu," will be brought back for the Thursday-Saturday bill with a William Boyd western, "Law of the Pampas." In Charlie's home town of Honolulu Sidney Toler as the wily Chan finds himself with a brace of murders to solve. This picture was the first in which Toler played the character created by the late Warner Oland.

SCENE FROM FEATURE PICTURE AT OHIO

Above are Paul Muni and Jane Bryan, playing the touching final love scene of "We Are Not Alone," the Ohio theater attraction through Monday.

JAMES HILTON FILM AT OHIO

Paul Muni Starred in Dramatic Presentation; Jane Bryan Also Featured.

Paul Muni, star of some of filmdom's finest productions, plays the stellar role in "We Are Not Alone," the picture version of the novel by James Hilton, now showing at the Ohio through Monday. Among other Hilton successes have been "Goodbye, Mr. Chipps" and "Lost Horizon."

Edmund Goulding, who made "The Old Maid" and "Dark Victory," directed the Muni film.

Playing opposite Muni is Jane Bryan, who gave a brilliant performance as Bette Davis' grown daughter in "The Old Maid." The cast includes Flora Robson as Muni's conventional and stupid wife who cannot understand her sensitive little son and only aggravated his nervousness by her stern, unsympathetic discipline.

Gripping Story

A "home grown" mustache and the customary grease paint were Muni's sole makeup for his latest character. As Dr. David Newcome, Muni plays a doctor in a small English town, not concerned with the outside world of 1914 because his own world is troubled enough. His son and a stranded little Viennese dancer he treats become attached and at his wife's suggestion the dancer comes into the home as the boy's governess. It would be unfair to tell the outcome of this simply told, moving story that closes on the doctor's saying "We are not alone in suffering injustice."

The Tuesday-Thursday picture is a timely film, "Espionage Agent," starring Joel McCrea and Brenda Marshall, with Jeffrey Lynn and George Bancroft heading a large supporting cast.

Tale of Intrigue

The story is of the breath-taking adventures of Uncle Sam's foreign legion, the agents who protect this nation against the secret plots of belligerent countries. Forced to resign from the service when the past history of his wife comes to light, the young diplomat, McCrea, and his wife, Miss Marshall, endeavor to circumvent by themselves the plotting of the spy ring for which the girl once worked.

Alice Faye and Warner Baxter are co-starred in "Barricade," booked for opening next Friday. Charles Winninger is featured with Arthur Treacher, Keye Luke and Willie Fung. Miss Faye plays an American girl in China, running away from murder into danger in a remote United States consulate besieged by bandits.

CAGNEY AND RAFT CO-STAR AT STATE

"Each Dawn I Die" Returns Here Sunday and Monday.

James Cagney and George Raft are co-starred in the fast-moving "Each Dawn I Die," which will be brought back to the State Sunday and Monday. Among the list of top supporting players are Victor Jory, Thurston Hall, Alan Baxter and George Bancroft. Cagney, a reporter on the trail of political racketeering, gets damaging evidence against the district attorney. The reporter is framed and sentenced on a manslaughter charge to get him out of the way. With him goes Raft, underworld big shot sentenced to life. Cagney helps Raft engineer a "break" and in return Raft promises to try to find the men who framed Cagney. From then on the film is action-packed. "Navy Secrets," on the same bill, offers Fay Wray and Grant Withers in the roles of navy spies assigned to a dangerous espionage mission.

A timely picture, "Clouds Over Europe," starring Laurence Olivier and Valeria Hobson will be brought back for a Tuesday-Wednesday double bill with "Love From a Stranger," with Ann Harding and Basil Rathbone starred.

One of the Thursday-Saturday pictures, "The Adventures of Jane Arden," featuring Rosella Towne and William Gargan, is based on the cartoon strip of the assignments of a girl reporter. The other picture will be a Tex Ritter western, "Starlight Over Texas."

SALT ROCK TWP. TRUSTEES ORGANIZE

MORRAL, Jan. 6.—H. A. Hall was elected president of the Salt Rock township board of trustees and George Rogers was elected vice president at an organization meeting in the township hall Tuesday.

Oaths of office were given to Mr. Hall and Constable John E. McCarley by Clerk-Treasurer P. A. Parker. Mr. Parker, who also was elected in November and is starting a new term, previously took the oath before Dwight Moore of Morral. The meeting Tuesday was the first for the new board which is composed of Mr. Hall, Mr. Rogers and Fred Fetter whose term does not expire until next year.

Mr. Hall, who served on the board for 14 years prior to 1937, succeeds Ransom Buck. Mr. Parker has been clerk-treasurer of the township board for 18 years and for 9 years was also clerk of the village of Morral. At the November election Mr. McCarley was elected both township constable and marshal of Morral village.

The board employed C. L. Starkey to operate the township's truck used in road maintenance work.

MARKET QUIET, FEW FAVORED

Most Issues Unchanged or Slightly Lower As Short Session Ends.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Jan. 6—It was a case of "no dice" for most stock market leaders today so far as a real rally was concerned.

With the exception of scattered favorites, the majority of issues was unchanged to a shade lower at the close.

Brokers saw little significance to price changes in the brief session, as offerings were never urgent and bidding was equally timid.

Business news of the moment was fairly cheerful, but doubters regarding industrial activity in coming months seemed to be growing in Wall street. In addition, the financial district was still a bit puzzled by the national budget and many traders continued to stand aside to await the next move of congress.

Stocks inclined to lag included U. S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Sears Roebuck, Douglas Aircraft, American Telephone, Phelps Dodge, Westinghouse, Union Carbide and Johns-Manville.

Chrysler did better at the last, managing to tack on a modest plus sign.

U. S. government securities improved but corporation bonds were a trifled mixed. Commodities were uneven.

Boston Wool

BOSTON, Jan. 6—Graded domestic wools were mostly quiet in Boston during the past week.

While quotations were mostly unchanged, they were largely nominal because of the absence of trading. Spot South African Merino wools received a moderate demand at steady prices. Orders were placed for moderate quantities of Merino wools to be imported from South Africa and also from South America. Graded combing bright fleece wools were quoted at 40 to 43 cents, in the grease, for fine Delaine, at 40 to 42 cents for half bloods and at 45 to 47 cents for three eighths and quarter bloods.

The Stars Say—

For Sunday, Jan. 7

SUNDAY'S horoscope is an excellent one for all affairs of clerics and the church, as well as for all sort of social, domestic and affectional activities. In other matters there is need for great vigilance and discretion, since there are signs of treacherous undermining, with sinister import. Beware of entanglement in underhanded affairs.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a favorable year in connection with work and serious matters; which are in line for recognition from elders and superior. Strictly private interels thrive and give pleasure, but be alert to sinister legal entanglements and intrigues in business relations.

A child born on this day may be studious, industrious and practical, and may attract recognition and reward from its superiors. However, there are possibilities of its having an inherent tendency to being secretive and sordid in attaining its objectives. It may be sly, crafty and tricky.

For Monday, Jan. 8

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is not a very propitious one, holding threats of disruption, distress, inharmony and sudden upheaval, especially in the private relations—domestic, social or romantic. This may be due to ungoverned and impetuous conduct in which there is a tendency to "fly off the handle" with trivial provocation. Beware of tempest, accidents and litigation, also fire or theft.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year in which turmoil, disaster and disruption may be due to their own unrestrained passions, language and fiery libidulgences. These, if allowed to dominate, will bring regrets, violence, accidents or litigation. Diverting such fiery forces and highly-stimulated energies into constructive channels should bring gain. Intimate relations are particularly menaced by want of control.

A child born on this day, while having great talents and abilities, with originality and initiative, may be a "fire-eater," squandering its assets unless given early discipline and direction.

THOMPSON

squarely in the eye, and six years of its practice checked up with results.

The dictatorial regimes of Europe owe their greatest prestige at home and abroad to the fact that they have abolished unemployment. Their success in this field demands some attention. So does the equal success of countries like Sweden and Holland.

Leaving out of account the various financing and trade shenanigans of the dictatorships, made necessary by their political policies and all the regimentation of totalitarianism and "Wehrwirtschaft," the fact is that the countries which have best overcome the unemployment bogy have done so by the very opposite of the New Deal program.

They have not thought to pull up the economy by artifically (uneconomically) raising the income level of certain groups, but have, by every possible means, encouraged continuing investment in capital goods—in wealth to create new wealth — and thereby have raised the national income.
